GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

"I've jest and joke
And quip and crank,
For lowly folk
And men of rank."

The House gags itself, 234 to 138, surrenders its conscience into the keeping of a small committee, and prepares to vote a burdensome tax on 125,000,000 people without permitting their Representatives to offer an amendment in their behalf. "I always voted at my party's call, And never thought of thinking for myself at all."

Young T. R. will soon be going up San Juan hill that leads to the Governor's house.

"He put in his thumb,
And pulled out a plum,
And said what a good boy am I."

Mr. Hoover cuts up the pie and serves some juicy slices to a lot of people the politicians didn't know about. How happy this will make everybody at the Capitol, who didn't get any plums.

A whole generation of Washingtonians have grown up who never, until now, have seen a slender steeple arising above the stately old church at New York avenue and H street, originally called the Second Presbyterian Church, although really the third in this city, and for years known as the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Erected in 1819 in what was then a mere common, the church was rebuilt, and a steeple was added in 1857, which for years was a familiar landmark, until in the great hurricane of September 29, 1856, it was blown away, and so, for 33 years, the edifice remained without a spire. It is only by tracing its origin back to the old F Street Presbyterian Church, which used to stand where the Willard Hotel now is, that the New York avenue church can claim to be 126 years old, and this is not historically accurate.

New Senator King he proposes a quip.

We'd rather the Senate would get down to bis,

We're rather discouraged with things as they is!

There's not enough substance and too much of fiz.

The bandits, bank robbers and bushwhackers of the country kindly decide to give the Law Enforcement Commission all the data they need.

Suddenly prominent prohibitionists, never before heard of, now living in the dry-voit, cawntin' South, kindly offers to help President Hoover run the United States Government and the Diplomatic Corps. Of course, the British Ambassador would agree to forego the privilege of importing wines and liquors, which are drunk by ladies and gentlemen in all civilised countries, if Uncle Sam should have the exceeding bad taste to demand it.

The Senate—appalling thought—seems to be veering around toward the abolition of secret sessions, thus inflicting upon the country a large output of oratory from which it is now happily spared. This country is not suffering from a lack of Senatorial publicity. As Pope says—

"But couldst thou seize some tongues that now are free, How church and state should be obliged to these!"

Highways hold up a couple of banks in Oklahoma and New Jersey. The modern American motto is, "You furnish the commission, and we'll furnish the crime."

And if the League of Nations can't regulate the size of the American Navy single handed Lloyd George will lend a helping hand if elected.

Marion Talley buys 640 acres of Kansas land planted in wheat, and if the debenture grab goes through it would have been cheaper for us if she had stayed in grand opera.

The trouble about the demand of the hot-headed non-thinkers for the abolition of executive sessions of the Senate is that if you "ban" them—as the copy desk would say—merely substitute for them secret understandings among Senators clandestinely arrived at outside the Senate, for such is human nature. Let us keep our "whispering campaigns" within the Capitol, bottled up, and publish only the final results, for, after all, the public is entitled only to know how a public servant votes, and the "why" is a matter between himself and his own conscience, and the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Henry Ford, the only rival of Socrates in the field of academic knowledge, announces from the Athenian groves of learning that prohibition is permanent, but, still, that's what we once thought about his opinion of the Jews.

Argentina, discovers that the House has taken "good will" out of the free list.

LABOR DEPARTMENT'S ACTIVITY IS EFFECTIVE

Woman Representative Works
Quietly for Days to Bring About Peace.

Special to The Washington Post.

Elizabeth, Tenn., May 24.—Miss Anna Weinstock, of Washington, a debonair young woman with a quiet way, came down to Happy Valley the other day with orders to end the long strike at the rayon mills today. Tonight she appears to stand on the threshold of success. Seven hundred mountain men and women, the striking employees, will crowd into Carter County Courthouse tomorrow afternoon to vote on the proposal that they call off the strike and go back to work.

Their meeting is largely the result of Miss Weinstock's labors. She came here quite two weeks ago from the Federal Department of Labor as its representative. So quietly did she remain here and so quietly did she work that for eight days nobody, save her superiors and the warring leaders, knew she was in town. During that time, however, she appeared to have succeeded in bringing both employers and employees nearer to a meeting point than they have been at any time since April 18, when the strike started.

It was as a result of her work that the Bemberg-Glanstoff Company officials put out their statement of yesterday expressing their willingness to reemploy striking employees. It was another move of hers that brings about the meeting in the courthouse tomorrow.

Earlier Statement Modified.

In the meantime, the company officials put out another statement today which apparently modifies to some extent their statement of yesterday. Today's pronouncement, addressed to all present and former employees, includes the significant line: "In simple justice to other employees, to our stockholders and customers, we must decline to employ persons of undesirable character."

Unofficially, company officials do not deny that this sentence means that the ringleaders of the strikers will not be taken back on the payroll. There are, perhaps, 100 men and women who led the strike movement who can not hope to return to work, even if they willed to do so. To the others, the employers offer employment as their various processes can be restored to normal, not later, it is expected, than June 10.

Tomorrow's meeting has been called, in the language of the Labor Department, who announced it, "to consider a matter of importance." The whole town knows that it is called to determine whether the strike shall go on or not. The company officials claim that they are operating now with only 50 or so employees fewer than normal. The strike leaders claim that many more 500 are out on strike.

Committee Meets Officials.

The Bemberg-Glanstoff invitation to striking employees to return to work, oddly enough, caused a genuine outburst on the part of those employees who had already returned to their places. They appointed a committee of about 25 former strikers and loyal

WIDESPREAD GALES BALK OCEAN RACERS

Both French and American Planes Are Delayed as Sea Is Swept by Storm.

START MONDAY IS LIKELY

Old Orchard, Me., May 24 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—Widespread storm areas in mid-Atlantic and all along the coast of Europe again cast doubt and uncertainty over the start of what still promises to be the first transatlantic airplane race.

Roger Williams and Capt. Lewis Yancy, the American Bellanca plane Green Flash, announced definitely to-night that they will not take off for Rome tomorrow, and will make no move to start until favorable weather reports are received from James H. Kimball, Governor of New York, and from Jean Amiel and René Leferve, who with Armand Lotti, Jr., comprise the crew of the French plane Yellow Bird, which they took off for Paris, but they put in a short stopover, then monoplane for its test, and then hurried to Portland to look over the Scarboro airport as a possible starting point.

Both remained uncommunicative when they returned, but gave the idea they will not start at any moment. The French fliers today took time on the landing wheels on their plane and fuelled the ship to capacity.

When the two planes take off they will be escorted not only by a Coast Guard cutter and a Gibraltarian, but by a huge 10-passenger Savoia-Marchetti amphibian, which will carry newspaper men out to sea with the two ocean planes for last-minute radio reports of the flights from this side. The amphibian will follow down the Seine River for the first 1,000 miles along the forty-sixth parallel.

ten days and promised to remain aloft until the 25th. They did not stand it. Today it appeared to be a question of whether the plane could outlast the men. The wives of the pilots went aloft in another plane and were relieved to see that their husbands did not strain as much as they had expected.

"In every letter I write him," Mrs. Robbins said, "I tell him he must stay up at least seven days."

On the sixth night in the air wore on the sky cleared. All day the Fort Worth had remained above low-hanging rain clouds.

The thirteenth refueling took place early tonight, 60 gallons of petrol being transferred from the supply ship, as well as food, laundry and supplies.

New York, May 24 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—After a series of conferences which lasted nearly all day and which were attended by at least one lawyer, as well as Martin and H. E. Clark, who discussed the question of landing the Bellanca monoplane, Three Musketeers, Thursday night, it was announced late today that the interrupted refueling flight would be undertaken again, and that the two men who had not been named, but it was reported Jensen would be in command and have Clark and William Ulrich with him. Clark had charge on the last two attempts, but had ended in failure. A. W. Card and Henry Bushmeyer, inventors of the catapult which tosses fuel and other supplies to the plane in flight, said the ship would be ready within three or four days.

THE TARIFF BILL.

The steam-roller of the House is working well in flattening out all attempts to amend the tariff bill. The ways and means committee may offer amendments, but members of the House are denied that right. Mr. Tilson, majority leader, states the case as follows:

The voice of the caucus was that the ways and means committee is representative of the Congress and the country as a whole and that after five months' consideration of the bill its members were better qualified to offer amendments rather than throw the entire bill open to every Tom, Dick and Harry.

This is the ideal method of pushing legislation through the House. But it does not insure the enactment of any bill, and especially a tariff bill. What the House proposes the Senate disposes of by substituting a bill of its own. Since the tariff bill was reported to the House much information has been forthcoming which indicates that the Senate will make radical changes. Even the House committee has accepted changes, notably by taking hides off the free list and increasing the duty on boots and shoes.

The Senate committee on finance is not bound to follow the House bill in any particular. No one knows what shape tariff legislation will take. The protest unexpectedly made by Representative Beck against increasing the President's tariff-making authority at the expense of Congress is having marked effect. Mr. Garner, Democratic leader, will move to recommit the bill in order to incorporate in it a provision for a fact-finding commission of four members appointed by Congress, and repealing the flexible provisions of the bill. He will also move to strike out a provision limiting the Customs Court in reappraisal cases, thus taking away the increased authority of the Treasury which the bill seeks to confer.

No doubt the House will vote down these proposals and pass the bill by a big majority. Nevertheless, the leaven is working, and objections voiced in the House against the transfer of tariff-making power to the Executive may be redoubled in the Senate. The bill improves upon present conditions by abolishing the hypocritical pretense that the Tariff Commission can be nonpartisan or bipartisan. It authorizes the President to appoint all commissioners from one party if he sees fit. This is as it should be, for experience has shown that no Tariff Commission can be nonpartisan, and that there is no reason why the commission should not be composed of members belonging to the party in power. The Republican party is committed to tariff protection, and no Congress controlled by Republicans can be expected to listen to a Tariff Commission which attempts to undermine protection.

A fact-finding commission answerable to Congress might be useful; certainly the Tariff Commission as it has been constituted is worse than useless.

THE AIRPORT BILL.

Leaders of the House having assured the joint congressional airport commission that every effort would be made to gain consideration for an airport bill during the present session, a bill has been prepared upon which action will be requested. The measure provides for the appropriation of $500,000. "To be immediately available and to remain available until expended, for the acquisition by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, subject to the approval of the joint commission on airports, of lands, or options to purchase lands, for an airport or airports adequate for the needs of the National Capital and the District of Columbia."

The commission wisely refrains from recommending any specific site for the airport or mentioning in the measure the method to be pursued in apportioning the cost of the development. These are controversial matters. Their consideration probably would lead to dispute that might prevent action on the measure. As it is, the bill provides merely for an appropriation with which an early start can be made on the project, leaving the disputed points to be ironed out later.

Almost unanimously both houses of Congress are alive to the need of developing airports in American cities. They realize that the National Capital can not develop properly without this necessary adjunct to twentieth century transportation. Since valuable time can be saved by enactment of the bill at this session it is hoped that Congress will not fail to pass the bill.

CHANGES IN BANKING.

Consolidation of large banking institutions has become an important item in current news.

Hardly a week passes without the announcement of new mergers of banking interests in New York and other money centers. The decrease in the number of commercial banks is so pronounced that President Hoover's committee on recent economic changes refers to it as one of the significant financial trends of the last seven years.

The number of banks operating in the United States reached a peak in 1921, with a total of 30,000. Since that time the tendency toward increase has been reversed, and 4,000 commercial banks have been eliminated from the field. In spite of this sharp reduction the committee finds that the banking system is still "constituted by a multiplicity of local banks exhibiting extreme diversity in size, in character and in experience of management, and in the surrounding economic conditions of the communities to be served." During the early years of the declining trend failures were largely responsible for the disappearance of banks. The movement is now being continued largely through mergers, voluntary liquidation, and the development of branch and chain banking.

Banking conditions have been radically changed within the last few years. Better means of communication have shortened distances between rural and urban districts. Country banks are not so necessary. Maintenance of small unit banks is too costly, when service equally as satisfactory can be provided by centralized institutions. Financing is now done by the metropolitan banks, and it is a question whether the small unit banks will be able to survive.

In an address this week before the Maryland Bankers Association, John W. Pole, Comptroller of the Currency, pointed out a new phase of this situation, namely, that large numbers of national banks are being converted into State institutions under trust company charters. Within the last six months, he said, 79 national banks with total resources of nearly $3,000,000,000 have passed under State jurisdiction. Banking interests are finding State charters advantageous because they permit branch banking.

Mr. Pole fears that unless Congress takes some action to make the national bank field more attractive this type of institution will gradually disappear. He sees in this tendency a "critical state," because banks chartered by the States can not be relied upon to serve as an instrumentality for enforcing a Federal fiscal policy. The time has come, says Mr. Pole, for Congress to formulate a new banking policy to meet present-day conditions. Congress has authority to give advantages to banks which operate under national charters. Shall the restriction against national banks engaging in branch banking be removed? Shall the function of the Federal Reserve system be expanded so that it will replace the disappearing national banks? The problem is one that demands the attention of the best minds in the field of finance.

FOOLHARDY FLIGHTS.

While two airplanes are poised on their runways, their pilots awaiting favorable weather reports to take off for Europe, Clarence Chamberlin announces that he hopes within a year to fly the Atlantic again. The ships poised for the flight are ordinary land planes, unequipped to survive the buffeting of the sea if they should be forced down. The ship in which Chamberlin hopes to repeat his transoceanic flight will be a flying boat or amphibian. "I am through with single-engine, land-plane flying over the ocean," he says. "I am not going to make the flight again until I have developed something distinctly above the land plane for safety."

Some day the Atlantic will be flown regularly, in comfort and in safety. The planes now awaiting clearing weather indicate that this day has not yet arrived. Both flights are foolhardy ventures, and useless so far as their practical effect is concerned. If William Shatford should reach Rome in the Green Flash he will have become the first to fly from the United States to Italy. If Lotti should reach Paris in his Bernard-191, he will have become the first Frenchman to complete a nonstop East-West crossing of the Atlantic. But neither flight will contribute any useful knowledge to the art of air navigation.

NO DISTINCTION BETWEEN LAWS.

In a letter addressed to George W. Wickesham, chairman of President Hoover's new law enforcement commission, Richard Washburn Child, acting chairman of the National Crime Commission, says: "A distinction should be made between law on the books and social will as it is found in fact." Mr. Child makes the point that disrespect for law may be increased by insistence that all laws stand upon one footing. He does not say that the eighteenth amendment can not be enforced, but he asserts that few people make a distinction between this law and other laws, and he pleads that the commission use its efforts to establish the fact that prohibition is an 'engrossed law' and not the 'law of the social will.'

Numerous instances may be cited of the failure of laws that work against what the majority believe to be their rights or privileges. The fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution have never been enforced, because they are opposed by the majority in the sections of the country where they were expected to apply.

The fatal flaw in Mr. Child's suggestion is his assumption that the will of the majority is easily ascertained and can be made effective as against statute law. Who can say what is the "social will?" Practically every test of the eighteenth amendment that has been made indicates that the prohibitionists are the majority of the population. But it is not for the law enforcement commission to declare that the drys or the wets are in the majority, or that no law is entitled to respect unless it can be shown to be the will of the majority. The people can not vote on every legislative proposal that comes up, and unless they do vote there is no certain method of ascertaining whether the majority favors or opposes the project. The suggestion that a distinction be made in the laws, whereby some of them should be assumed to be a genuine expression of the popular will and others spurious, is in its essence a proposal to substitute mob rule for the law-making power.

The captain of lifeguards at a New Jersey beach has banned, on the ground that they make bathing perilous, bathing suits of knee and elbow length flannel with pantaloons. For once a regulation is adopted that will raise no enforcement problem.

Maybe this could be made a law-abiding Nation if all children were imprisoned at 6, not to be released until they had reached their majority.

The Bureau of Efficiency having tackled the problem of prisoner privacy, perhaps it next will take up the problem as it applies to gold fish.

FARM RELIEF LEGISLATION

By S. H. DEVAULT,
Head, Department of Agricultural Economics, University of Maryland.

A special session of Congress has been called for the purpose of working out some form of legislation on farm relief that presumably will be sound economically and will meet with the approval of the President. It is not surprising that the members of both houses of Congress should be at variance with respect to the type of legislation that should prove of greatest benefit to agriculture. Old as the industry of agriculture is, the economic principles underlying it are less understood than in almost any other business. It has been only within recent years that much attention has been directed toward the economic phases of agriculture, particularly along the lines of price analyses, control of surplus, regional competition, and the financing and marketing of farm products.

Great changes have taken place in the agricultural industry within recent years. Improved means of transportation and communication have brought about regional competition within our own country, and the development of science and technique has made it possible for fewer agricultural workers to produce food to supply the needs of an increasing population. This development in science and technique has not been confined to this country alone, but has also rapidly expanded in other countries of the world. The result is, we are face to face with the competition of foreign products on our own markets and on some products which we export in considerable quantities, we come in competition with foreign products on the world markets.

It is apparent to economic students, who have been giving thought to this problem for many years, that there is no single remedy that will cure all of the ills of agriculture. The economic principles underlying the agricultural situation are many and complex. Any type of legislation that centers on one phase of the problem, and attempts by artificial means to raise the price of farm commodities to the producers, is doomed to meet with failure.

The export debenture plan has been incorporated into the farm relief bill by the Senate. Undoubtedly this will cause some delay in the passage of sound, enabling and stabilizing legislation. In the final action, however, the debenture plan is sure to be defeated. While this bill has received some recognition by certain farm organizations and agricultural economists, it is inconceivable how it could prove of any aid to agriculture. The President in his letter to Senator McNary, April 20, 1929, sets forth ten sound economic reasons why the bill would spell disaster for the farmer. It is applicable to only a few commodities, which would tend to stimulate an overproduction of those commodities coming under the plan and bring about an unbalance in our agricultural production program. A large part of the value of the debenture certificates would go to the export merchants and not to the farmer. These certificates would have to be traded through brokers and in many cases at a considerable discount. Then, in the final analysis, granting that the plan would work with the seven or eight principal export commodities, which it would not, it would not take care of the many farmers who are producing perishable products and other commodities not exported at all or in any considerable amounts.

Such legislation, however, is that embodied in the Federal Farm Board bill, which is very broad in scope and administration, would prove of great benefit to agriculture. This board would be to agriculture what the Interstate Commerce Commission is to transportation or the Federal Reserve Board to banking and currency. It would have the power to direct its attention and efforts toward all phases of the agricultural industry, including problems of the tariff, storage, and finance of farm products, regional, national and international competition, surpluses, land utilization, and economic production and marketing.

What agriculture needs more than anything else is enabling legislation, that is, legislation that will help the farmers to help themselves. Farmers do not ask for nor do they need a subsidy for their business. All they ask is for such legislation and support as will aid them in the solution of their own economic problems. The type of legislation that is embodied in the Federal Farm Board bill, administered by a group of men who have had a broad and comprehensive training in farm organization, production and marketing problems and who are in sympathy with the farm problem and with agriculture in general, would be the most constructive effort ever directed toward the stabilization and improvement of agriculture.

as against statute law. Who can say what is the "social will?" Practically every test of the eighteenth amendment that has been made indicates that the prohibitionists are the majority of the population. But it is not for the law enforcement commission to declare that the drys or the wets are in the majority, or that no law is entitled to respect unless it can be shown to be the will of the majority. The people can not vote on every legislative proposal that comes up, and unless they do vote there is no certain method of ascertaining whether the majority favors or opposes the project. The suggestion that a distinction be made in the laws, whereby some of them should be assumed to be a genuine expression of the popular will and others spurious, is in its essence a proposal to substitute mob rule for the law-making power.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to a Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLIN

MY DEAR LOUISE: When you set forth in the rain this morning, I saw on the back of your lemon-yellow coat a black duck carrying an umbrella, and beneath it, in letters 3 inches high the astonishing declaration: "This is Liza."

The coat, the emblem and the legend are symptoms of the tenth grade and require no comment; the name must serve as text for a sermon.

Fifteen years ago that name was my pet abomination. Applying it to you seemed a good joke. But it became your nickname, sweet in the mouth of your friends, and now I use it as a matter of course and it seems no less affectionate than "Honey."

So much for the power of habit.

I wish I could make you understand how completely you are and will be the slave of custom.

Every moment of your life, awake or asleep, you are the slave of habit.

Your tone of voice, your grammar, your table manners, your truthfulness or want of it, your ability to remember, your tastes and appetites— even the position of your arms when you sleep—all are dictated by habit, and thus your every act is the act of a slave whose master drives him.

Habit is the work of your subconscious mind; and just as your heart beats without instruction from you, so habit fills each moment of your life and functions without your conscious approval unless you make deliberate effort to establish habits of your own choosing.

You are like a garden. Flowers may be planted and the weeds kept out; but in any case the soil will be occupied, and if you leave the result to chance, the weeds may choke out the flowers.

Habits will boss you. That much is certain. You can develop the ones you like, or you can remain neutral and let nature take its course. But whatever you do or fail to do, habit will hold you in chains while you live.

How can you form a habit? Well, a car on a muddy road skids easily into the rut made by many cars, and once in the rut it remains there until force pulls it out.

When you dress, comb your hair, brush your teeth and do other things like that, your hands are like automatic machines, for your thoughts are busy at something else. Doing these things many times has worn a groove in your mind, and your subconscious mind operates in the groove worn by habit and directs your hands without your knowledge or consent.

When you do a thing the first time, your conscious mind must direct every movement. But when you do it the tenth time, your movements are automatic.

Choose the habit you wish to form; practice it every day for a month, and you can trust it to do its stuff without a word from you.

Bossed you will be, whether you like it or not, but you can choose your bosses.

"STICK 'EM UP."

"Put up your dukes!" The footpads used to challenge the wayfarer with this equivalent of "Hands up!" One still hears it occasionally, says the Kansas City Star, from North Side pugs who are not authorized by the State Boxing Commission, and occasionally the police bulletin records such an utterance as having come from some big-jowled bandit who, by the word "duke," has linked himself up with generations and generations of scoundrels.

Dukes. Why this noble appellation for the hands, the mitts, the hooks, the shakers? Like so many underworld words which by their gibl lyrical quality and oddity tickle the tympans of the writer of detective fiction and the police reporter, dukes has its etymological roots in the romantic vagabondry of old England.

Dukes is short for Dukes of York, or, as the rhyming canter of old London called it, Duke of Yorks. Duke of Yorks was the patent rhyme among rogues and scoundrels for forks, and forks before that, since first forks were invented, were hands. And before that hands were indeed forks.

The plug-ugly who today says dukes is not necessarily a rhymester, nor is he cognizant of the fantastic origin of the word. But his scoundrelly forebears were rhyme patters or chanters of the lowest order who, aside from picking pockets, selling watches containing no mechanism but beetles, and worthless parts for razor strops, sold in rhyme accounts of disasters which never happened, "faithful and true accounts" of the burning of Farmer Chittiberry's countryside manse, his wife and nine children. Through this yellow and poetic journalism they created a set of patent rhymes. These rhymes later formed the vocabulary of rhyming cant. There was no plot except that which was provided. An unvarnished autobiography is the easiest of all books to write. In a few cases, such as Mr. Coolidge's, it is as easy to read.

It no doubt seems odd to you that a busy banker should take so much time to go into an apparently trivial matter with you. But the fact of the matter is that this particular breed of dogs is grossly maligned, and all sorts of savage tendencies attributed to it, because of its supposed wolf-blood. This results in an unjustified libel on a breed which I personally happen to believe is the acme of canine perfection. I have owned and bred these dogs for years—have conducted one of the most successful show kennels in the breed—and have taken an active part in its welfare. So perhaps you will excuse my drawing these facts to your attention.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Hoover had with them as guests for dinner last night Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Adams and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Hill.

Mrs. Stimson made her debut in Washington as a member of the Cabinet group yesterday afternoon when she attended the international tennis matches at the Chevy Chase Club. With Mrs. Stimson was a guest of Mrs. William De Witt Mitchell, to whom Mrs. Hoover had presented the White House box.

Although she has been with Secretary Stimson at the Wardman Park Hotel for a week, Mrs. Hoover's arrival had been kept secret from all but a few of her friends, as she has been ill and was unable to make any engagements.

Others with Mrs. Mitchell yesterday were Mrs. Butler, Mrs. James W. Good, Mrs. Charles Adams, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley and Mrs. Robert Monroe, wife of the President's naval aid. Commander Joel T. Boone served as escort. He was out of uniform this time. Although he had been in spats, ducks when he accompanied his mother to the tennis matches the day before.

Mr. Dwight F. Davis, donor of the Davis Cup, who was out of town when the cup matches opened on Thursday, was much in evidence yesterday afternoon to see the doubles played on by the United States and Japan teams. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Alice Davis, who had Mr. W. J. B. Macauley, of the Irish Free State Legion, at her elbow most of the afternoon.

Galleries at Tennis Contest Again Crowded.

The "bleachers" beside the Chevy Chase Courts were as crowded on the second day of the matches as on the first, and the gallery was equally distinguished. The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Debuchi entertained guests in their box.

Among the "repeaters" who seem to be taking their tennis seriously, were the Ambassador of Spain and his wife, the Senator and Mrs. Debuchi, and Seniors Rose Padilla, the Ambassador of Germany and Frau Von Prittwitz und Gaffron, the Minister of Sweden, Mr. Bostrom; Mrs. Walter Evans Edge, Princess Elizabeth de Ligne, Princess Antoniette de Ligne, Mlle. Jeanne Croze, Mrs. Benjamin R. Holcombe, Mrs. J. Harry Covington and Dr. Leo S. Rowe.

Maj. Georges Theraul, of the French Embassy, an ardent tennis fan, was present with his tennis拍子.

Brilliant Gathering at Mme. Wu's Reception.

Some of the spectators hurried away from the tennis matches to attend the reception given by Mme. Wu, wife of the Minister of China. The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Debuchi were in this group, and so was Mrs. William Davis, who was among the ladies assisting the hostess.

The legation, which has beautiful Chinese panels as a feature of its decorations, was flower bedecked yesterday afternoon and on the buffet in the dining room and on the tables of white peacock and corn flower. Spring flowers were used on the tea table, their colors repeated in the gauzy frocks of the ladies who presided. Mrs. Mitchell's costume was of soft red silk, with a wide white sash, and at one moment in the afternoon, one found Mrs. Ray Lyman Wilbur all in corn flower blue, with a big blue hat, at one end of the table, with Mrs. St. Bloom, a marie-rose a soft red sash, a contrast at the other end.

The charming hostess was extremely pictorial in Chinese dress of amber satin, embroidered all over in pastel tints, and wore gaily embroidered slippers to match.

Silvia Diaz, wife of the Ambassador of Chile, took her turn at the tea table in the course of the afternoon, and others assisting Mme. Wu were Mrs. Charles E. McNary, Mrs. Edward G. T. Cheesman, Mrs. Walter S. Drysdale and Mrs. G. T. Chase.

The Diplomatic Corps had generous representation at the fete and others glimpsed among the several hundred guests were Mrs. James B. Parker, Mrs. Edward G. T. Cheesman, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Joseph Strauss, Miss Helen Strauss, Mrs. George Aker-

$125,000 IS STOLEN IN 2 BANK HOLDUPS

Oklahoma Money Car Robbed of $75,000 While Gang in East Gets $50,000.

ONE MAN SHOT IN RAIDS

Oklahoma City, May 24 (A.P.)—Five men who had been robbing the American First National Bank here today, shot the messenger, Charles H. Vowell, in the arm, and escaped through crowded streets with about $75,000 in currency.

Hugh Johnson, chairman of the board of the bank, previously had announced that $85,000 was taken, but the robbers overlocked $10,000 in bills of last denomination. The man who Vowell was carrying in his pocket, Vowell, 21, was not seriously injured.

Vowell and Crede Harper, negro chauffeur, had just left the Federal Reserve Bank when the holdup began at 10:45 a.m. Saturday, pay rolls, when they were held up by two men from the robbers' car, which came up from behind as the bank car slowed down for a stop at one of the corners. One man remained at the wheel of the robbers' car, and two were stationed on corners to hold back the crowd. Vowell was shot in the arm as he reached for his gun.

Reassembling in their own car, the robbers drove along the same course through the residential section until they had shaken off pursuit.

Gov. W. J. Holloway offered the maximum State reward of $1,000 each for the arrest and conviction of the robbers.

East Orange, N. J., May 24 (A.P.)—Four robbers today held up the East Orange Trust Co. and escaped with what officials described as a "modest sum." The institution is the second largest in the city.

William H. Kelly, president of the institution, later estimated the loot at $25,000.

At first it was believed that the sum would run in excess of $50,000. Kelly said all the ready cash in the place was taken with the exception of $10,000 in one vault which was locked.

On the door of this vault Detective John McKinley said he observed an excellent fingerprint impression.

The bank reopened its doors for business shortly after the robbery, when the Essex County Trust Co., a neighboring bank, furnished its funds.

Patrons and employees were lined up with their faces to the wall in the rear of the bank so quickly by the precise action of the gang that none had opportunity to reach one of the several connections of the holdup alarm.

Thompson refused to reveal details of the conversation, but asserted Miss Rubens made admissions which would be of material aid in an investigation of conditions in the film capital.

Penny Matcher Loses $200 in Depot Game

Another victim of the much-practiced penny-matching game at Union Station, yesterday took his complaint to the police of the Sixth Precinct after he had been flimflammed out of $200 by two strangers.

The latest victim was Aage Kramer, of Racine, Wis., who was enticed into penny matching with the strangers while waiting during a change of trains at the station. He told police that he is on his way to visit relatives in Copenhagen, Denmark.

An average of one complaint a week is received by police from travelers victimized by "friendly strangers" who offer relief from the boredom of waiting for trains with the suggestion of matching pennies.

DRAGNET IS THROWN OUT

SECRET WEDDING RELATED

Los Angeles, May 24 (A.P.)—Threatened with separation from her 3-year-old daughter, Mrs. Marian Cochrane broke down today under police questioning here and confessed that her husband, Eddie Cochrane, was one of the robbers who shot to death two Agua Caliente Co. bank messengers last Monday near San Diego. The robbers escaped with $85,000 in checks and cash.

The shooting occurred when Walton visited Hamilton at his law office to tell him of his secret marriage with Theresa. She had then urged the advice of his mother to "tell the judge all about it." Mrs. Walton had told her son she would take her from her custody.

While a coroner's jury decided late today that the two messengers were shot and killed by "parties unknown," Southern California authorities sought Cochrane, who was identified as M. B. Colson, in custody. The two messengers were Nemesis Monroe and Jose Borrego.

Mrs. Cochrane's confession here and the inquest over the dead messengers in San Diego determined the most important developments in the investigation of the sensational day-long holdup.

Two witnesses at the inquest, who were at work near the scene of the holdup, testified that Colson resembled the man who fired the machine gun which deposited nine bullets in Monroe's body and two in that of Borrego. Colson has refused to make any statement.

Today's proceedings were featured by the entrance of Walton's young widow. Theresa, told of marriage against her father's will. It was in February, she and the boy she loved were students at the University of Texas. She had talked with her father early in the year, but he had refused to let them both out of school and Walton had employment. Hamilton did not object to the marriage if postponed.

Walton, who had been leaving school to go to Amarillo and wanted to have the ceremony before he left Austin, she said. She wanted to defer it, but finally consented, with the understanding it would be kept a secret.

In addition to Cochrane, police tonight also were seeking Kearnay, "Red Head," whose real name is said to be Jean Klastichef, and Marcel Dellaun and Helen Maddux, said by Mrs. Kearnay to have knowledge of the "job" on the highway south of San Diego.

Dr. J. J. Vaughan, who treated Walton's body soon after the shooting, testified Walton was shot twice in the back.

Hendricks said also he sold a pistol to Hamilton three weeks before the shooting.

Good Form and Bad Habits

VOGUE

THE bride paths in town parks reveal the fact that many followers of the sport are quite ignorant of the correct dress. Of all clothes, the coat and the hat are the most definite for tradition has confined them to the comfortable and familiar. But the habit may be perfectly tailored. The whole effect of the rider may be marred by incorrect accessories. For instance, the stick, that primitive accompaniment of the form, is abandoned by many as being too complicated to master. In reality, it is very simple and an essential of smart correctness for formal park riding. The type of stick used is a heavy white pigue about nine inches (sufficiently wide to fit the neck when the strip is folded four times) by two yards in length. It is wound once around the neck—one end coming under the neck—the other end pointing to the shoulder, hanger style to the shirt. The same end is turned up to cover the pin, and both ends are knotted once, tightly. They are

Uncle Ray's Corner

A Little Saturday Talk.

HAZEL SHEPARD, age 12, has sent me a puzzle which I shall pass on to you. It goes like this: "A man who wanted to get across a river was a good swimmer, but he had ONE eye—that's why he could see the skies. He took ONE tree with TWO apples. He took ONE apple off, and he left ONE apple on."

People may tell you that there is a trick in the language—and, of course, they are right—but I can assure you that this is a real puzzle, as it is a trick in them somewhere.

Who else would like to have a leaflet on "Home Pastimes for Boys and Girls"? Hundreds of copies have already been sent out, but more are to be had, free of charge, in a stamped envelope, addressed to yourself. Address your letter to Uncle Ray, Editor of Uncle Ray's Corner, in care of the newspaper. We are sure that the moment engaged blazed all hope of successful recording of the sounds at the track. The Pathé operator got New York on the wire, and told them to make the running of the film by watch and keep up the sound on a master record from a radio loud speaker from the springing of the barrier to the last roar of the crowd. That is what was done. And the remarkable part of the whole scene was that the synchronization was perfect.

Oh, that thought for the pork packers is merely that instead of wasting the squall which heretofore has been the only part of the pig not utilized, it may be better to make use of the talking screen and use it to the advantage of the executives when the stars begin to talk salaries!

Any way, there are ever so many department stores that have classes in lampshade making. And while learning, make the practical ones you want under the personal supervision of an experienced instructor.

If not at a department store, then evening classes in high school. Don't laugh, "better men than you are" are in the Old Towne "Windfall" at the corner of Minnesota and Main street southeast.

I think puzzles are plenty of fun, but they are a very old one which may interest you.

There was a man who had no eyes. He went abroad to view the skies. He saw a tree with apples on. He took no apples off, yet he left no apples on.

How did he do it? I have asked that question of people many times, and almost always they are "stumped." See whether you can figure it out.

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN

Probably the most popular writer of an earlier generation, Clara Louise Burnham, was born this day, 1886. She was the daughter of George F. Root who composed "The Battle Cry of Freedom," "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," and other famous American songs.

Young girls were noted for their bright airy chatter and sparkling wit. They shone in sharp relief the superficial oddities and mannerisms of the times. I know—Edna Wallace Hopper!

Did you know that:

Three eighth-sets written for a six producer (Cecil B. De Mille) in a picture of a woman's life on the West Coast, had the unmitigated audacity to mail me a communication of which I quote only the part I have read:

"Bubble Leg" Leon Errol and Ned Prentiss, the stuttering vaudeville agent of the Broadway stock company, in partners in an auto-painting concern. Where they grabbed Lane Chandler and put him into the movies the Standard Oil Co. lost a perfectly good film station operator.

Coal miners, a scarcer article in California than it is in the Far East?

Dorothy Sebastian, known as "Little Alabama" is descended from a long line of religious leaders, and that her grandfather was a Presbyterian, founded the first Presbyterian Church in the State of Alabama?

Tim McCoy is one of the foremost authorities on Indians in the world?

Well, that makes us a "tite" and having that much space filled, what of it?

"Through Different Eyes" the distinctly different courtroom melodrama that terminated its Washington premiere at the Fox yesterday, marked the

Girl, 5, Hides Pea in Ear; Wins Game; Calls Doctor

Poplar Bluff, Mo., May 24 (A.P.)—Maxine Webb, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Webb of Poplar Bluff, Mo., won a pea hiding contest in which she participated with several other children, but so securely did she hide the pea that it took a doctor with surgical instruments to find it and remove it from her ear.

The child was brought to a hospital here for removal of the pea and an operation was necessary. She will recover.

THE DRAMA OF LIFE

“All the world’s a stage, and all the men and women merely players.”

Thus sang the Bard of Avon several centuries ago, and what was true then is just as true today.

“All the world’s a stage,” and each man and woman must play his part in the drama of life.

You can play the part you choose. You can be hero, villain, or clown.

You can’t rehearse the villain’s part and then step in and play the hero, and gain applause. Be a hero from the first.

The only parts really worth while are those which help the rest of the players.

Your part must be to see that right triumphs and that justice is gained for all.

You can gain the encore with the approbation of the rest of the world, if you choose the best part, and play it well.

We who wish to be something must choose the better part.

Then we must rehearse until we are letter perfect.

To Succeed We Must Live the Parts We Play.

And when the final curtain falls we will have done our share toward making the drama of life a success.

LATE PROFIT TAKING CHECKS PRICE RALLY

Professionals Push Stocks Forward as Call Money Holds at 6 Per Cent.

ATCHISON STRONG SPOT

"New York, May 24 (A.P.)—On renewed predictions of stormy weather in the money market traders rushed to take profits on the final hour of today's session of the Stock Exchange, and reduced the rally which had begun yesterday from the low price levels reached in Wednesday's drastic break. Retention of the New York Federal Reserve Bank's 5 per cent discount rate and the drop of $45,000,000 in brokers' loans formed the background for vigorous professional operations for the advance during the early hours of the session, which was the most active since the stocks up about 1 to 8 points, but in the final hour the pros actively traded to take their profits quickly rather than carry stocks over the week-end and into uncertain conditions. The market was largely lost, and most of the more conspicuous issues were carried 1 to 6 points lower.

Funds Lowest Since August.

Call money held at officially 6 per cent all day, the lowest since last month, but funds were abundantly available in the outside market as 5 per cent. Time money, however, moved even higher in anticipation of a severe money pinch during the midyear settlements, beginning next week, and persistently tight money for some weeks thereafter. The longer maturities, on a flat rate of 9 per cent, while 60-90 day rates were at 9 1/2 per cent, and in some cases 9 1/4. The day's industrial and business news had both bright and dark spots. While executives at the meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute gave optimistic future volume of business, Charles M. Schlesinger declared that this should not be taken as truth that the earnings on the large investment are far from adequate to provide for the industry's future service to the country."

"Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. sent in its quarterly dividend for the first time in five years, but this was attributed to unusual conditions affecting this company's capitalization plan calling for a split up of the group of valuable rights." General Motors acquired the Allison Engineering Co. which is developing a Diesel aviation motor, which it is expected, will be brought out in competition to Packard's newly developed motor.

Some Sell Up Briskly.

Such issues as General Electric, General Motors, American Electric, Columbia Gas, Westinghouse, Electric, Columbia Graphophone, Electric Auto, Lite, United Aircraft and Sparks, Winton, and close up briskly, only to fall back to a point or two lower. Allied Chemical, Auton Auto and National Cash Register declined about 4 points. International Telephone and Bell telephone, lost 6 points net, and Keith Albee dropped 8. U. S. Steel and Radco also lost 3 points off. Atchison, Turner & Santa Fe was an outstanding strong net, mounting nearly 8 points to a new peak at 200 1/2. Here Marquette sold about 7 1/2 points higher, and American Type Foundry, Allis-Chalmers and Commercial Investment Trust, gained 3 and 5 points. Commercial Sciences mounted 8 points, and General Bremen and McCall Corporation sold up 3 and 6 points to a new peak. Baldwin mounted 5 points on substantial new orders. Adolf Goebel improved on rumors with Postum and oils we steady to firm on higher crude and oil prices. Commodities were mostly steady, with futures again breaking new ground. That is, a good deal on reports of better weather and corn suffering similar losses. Cotton sold higher for a time, but soon ran into selling and closed 30 cents lower. Foreign exchanges stiffened, sterling getting back to $4.85 15-16, which was still low enough to bring gold from London. Marks rose 3 points to 30.80 cents.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, May 24 (A.P.)—Early declines in the market were of immediate weather conditions in the South, but after showing net advances to 10 1/2 points price was held under renewed pressure of foreign contracts which had sold up to 18.75 cents, and closed at 16.60, coming down 18.65 to 16.50 cents the previous day. The market closed steady at net declines of 6 to 12 points.

It was steady at a decline of 2 to 10 points under heavy selling which seemed to combine with some local weather in the South. The market in current contracts ended at midday with a report that no sales were reported.

Some sales were caused by the opening, but after selling off to 10 cents during the first hour, it was again steady, the last sale being at 16.50 cents reported at midday over July. The market closed steady at net declines of 6 to 12 points.

on the Japanese team in the doubles and the Americans concentrated their attack on his section with gratifying results.

Resuming play with Van Ryn yesterday, Ohio was trailing by 4-5-7,

2-6 and the games were in favor of the Americans.

After accurate returns of Van Ryn's hardest drives and his own scintillating pounding game from his back court position which he maintained throughout the match, deigning not to let the net even when Van Ryn sought to entice him up with a lobbing game.

The third set of the match was the feature of the play in the series thus far, with the advantage remaining with

Van Ryn and the set and match point in the tenth game when Ohta countered with a tantalizing lobbing attack that completely baffled the young American.

Ohta's Annoying Lobs Feature Long-Drawn Fourth Set.

Ohta's lobbing at this point was the outstanding development of the match.

With Van Ryn playing a strong net game and ever eager to advance on the court in an effort to draw his Japanese opponent in, Ohta unleashed a scintillating display of lazy and half-speed lobbs that floated over Van Ryn's head to the back court and bounded for our

of results in the fourth set of an overspin that Ohta applied.

Deuce games were a feature of the long-drawn fourth set which decided the match. Van Ryn opened the set with a winning service, Ohta responded with an accurate return of Van Ryn's service and the set and match point in the second game, displaying for the first time his effective lob for the decisive point after the American had held a 3-point advantage at the start.

Ohta's lobbing was in rapid fashion with his back court placements and side-line drives baffling Van Ryn.

The American rallied at this point and took the next three games with his lobbing, his lobs from a bounding game to a chop stroke while Ohta settled frequently.

Ohta scored on his own serve in the next game after it had gone to deuce, and Van Ryn then put out his fifth game of the match in a rapid fashion with his back court placements and side-line

drives baffling Van Ryn.

NATS' PITCHING SHORTAGE BEMOANED BY JOHNSON

Pitching Keeps Nats Down In Race

Will Insist Next Year on More Pitchers in Training Camp.

Shortage and Injuries Discouraging to Nats' Manager.

By FRANK H. YOUNG

(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 24.—"I may not be a manager long—you never can tell—but I'll guarantee one thing," said Walter Johnson to me this morning. "I am going to insist upon having more pitchers in the future than the Washington Team had this season. We only had twelve at Tampa this spring and one, Paul McCullough, hasn't shown up yet. Jim Weaver didn't show enough to tolerate, while Guy Campbell was made a free agent by Judge Landis."

"Even with the eleven pitchers we had at the spring camp, we were continually faced with the shortage of hurlers, has proven a big disadvantage to us ever since. Right now, with both Adolph Liska and Sam Jones out because of injuries, we're really up against it and I'm having trouble finding a starter, much less trying to get some pitching in the pre-game batting drills."

Mount Staff Lacks Both Quality and Quantity

As a matter of fact, Johnson could manage with nine flingers, the number he now has, provided they actually were flingers, but quality in addition to quantity is lacking. Instead of selecting his best, keep, while looking over his talent at the Tampa camp, the Nats' leader simply was forced to send his worst away and had to keep the rest irrespective of whether or not they were of big league caliber.

His plans called for Adolph Liska, Sam Jones, Irving Hadley and George Braxton to do his staffing, while Fred Marberry, a 30-year-old right-hander, and Lloyd Brown, Bob Burke, Paul Hopkins and Archie Campbell helping out and also driving the hurling in wad drills.

Injuries are all part of the game and must be expected, but the information that the team is so serious about the Mount staff this season had to occur to pitchers. This forced Johnson to use his second stringers and, not only have they proven to be "flat tires," but Hadley, one of the four starters, has been a big disappointment.

Pitching Keeping Club Down In Race as Hitting Improves.

Earlier this season, the pitchers just about held their own and the team was good after that, but because of their inability to hit in the pinches or because of poor and sometimes stupid baseball. Now, with the team playing smart baseball, and showing signs of a healing process, it looks as if mound work will continue to keep them down in the race.

For tomorrow, for instance, Manager Johnson is distinctly up against it in connection with a pitcher. Bob Burke has done well this year, but Fred Marberry, despite the fact that he has not been feeling well of late, likely will get the call. Jack Quinn, aging spitter, likely will perform for Connie Mack.

Macks Owe Lead to 10 Wins Over Nats in 11 Games.

This afternoon's game marked the half-way mark of the season, battles between the Nats and the Macks being the seventh of the 22 scheduled. Of this number, the Washington team has the proud distinction of having exactly one. Needless to state, 10 victories over the Nats have been a great deal to do with the Macks' league leadership.

PITT DEFEATS HUFTY IN INDIAN SPRING FINALS, 2-1

Congressional Star 2 Up
At Turn

Huftu Fails to Win
a Hole After 12th
in Title Play.

Pitt Loses 3 of First
4 Holes; 3 Down
on 11th Tee.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.
HARRY C. PITTS, of the Maur-Club and Middle Atlantic golf champion, yesterday won the annual spring invitation tournament of the Indian Spring Club, defeating Page Hufty, champion of the Congressional Club, in the seventeenth green of the round robin. 2 and 1. In the semifinal round Pitt defeated Charles W. Cole, Jr., Indian Spring, 4 and 3, while Hufty eliminated Lefroy Sasser, Carter, Indian Spring, by the wider margin of 5 and 3.

At the beginning of the final round Hufty was apparently destined to achieve an easy victory over his opponent, for he won three out of the first four holes. On each of these holes Pitt escaped successfully into the rough, followed with over-approaches to the green, with a procession of 8s upon his card, while Hufty was driving long and straight down the fairway, and reaching the green with his second shot. The only exception was the third hole, which Pitt might have won, but Hufty laid him a stymie.
The hole was halved in 5s. Pitt did not win the next hole, but got into the rough, with a trap, and was able to get out with a 3 and 2. Hufty was, therefore, 2 up at the turn, and became 3 up when Pitt three-putted
the tenth green.

While there were few strokes throughout the round, which gave the galleries occasion for applause, the playing of the eleventh hole will long be remembered. This hole is 285 yards in length, and Pitt reached the green with a fine shot, his ball coming to a stop 10 feet from the cup.
Hufty, with an accurately played long and high pitch, laid his ball about 2 feet from the pin. With a remarkable putt that only missed Hufty's ball by the breadth of a hair, Pitt holed out his birdie.

The beginning of the end came on the thirteenth hole. Curiously enough, it was on this same hole that Hufty two years ago met with disaster in his match with George C. Cole, at that time the champion, who hit a 3 and 2.
Hufty was, therefore, 2 up at the turn, and lost when he missed a 2-foot putt, and thereafter Voigt won every hole.

History Repeats Itself on 13th Hole Which Turned Tide of Victory.
Yesterday history repeated itself when Hufty three-putted the green and lost in a 5 to Pitt's 4, never winning another hole. On the fourteenth Pitt played to the green, 170 yards, and Hufty sliced into the trap, which he escaped with a 1-mach putt, and thereafter Voigt won every hole.

A missed approach on the fifteenth was fatal to Hufty and the match was all over. On the sixteenth he broke into the rough, and his second into a ditch from which he lifted out with a penalty stroke and finally holed out in 8. Pitt scoring a par 5 and becoming 1 up. On the seventeenth, 184 yards, Pitt played directly to the green, and Hufty pushed his ball into the rough, the right player his second into a trap, where he grounded his club and then picked up, Pitt winning the match 2 and 1. The battle was uphill all the way for Pitt until Hufty ran against his hoof on the thirteenth hole, and that was a great match. Pitt to win a hard one for Hufty to have.

The Return Of
OLD KING BRADYRevised by MERLE W. HERSEY
(Copyright Protected. Reproduction in Whole or in Part Prohibited.)

TRACKING A "TRICKSTER" TO TENNESSEE.
CHAPTER VII.

YOUNG KING BRADY saw the first fight of the moonshiners from a height just as Old King Brady saw the second. The result of this attack was a complete victory for the Hights, as had been told.

"You mustn't stay here, master," said Toady. "It's all over now; it's time for us to git."

"Where do we go, Toady?" questioned Harry. "You might as well tell me now."

"To Pete Pood's old still," replied the boy, "but you dunno what that 'ar is."

"Do you think my father is there?"

"Think hit are likely. I couldn't say for sure."

It was now just about daylight, and as they rode on along the ridge, Harry saw several moonshiners gazing below them. Men were running up and down excitedly, but as yet there was no general move toward the upper camp.

They dismounted. Toady turned the horse, which was a matter of some difficulty on the narrow ledge, and giving him a cut sent him back by the way they had come.

"What's that for?" asked Young King Brady doubtfully. "Won't he go back to the horse?"

"Course he will. That's what I want."

The ledge was narrow and the going rough. "This is hard going," grunted Harry. "How much farther do we have to go?"

"Only a little way," replied Toady. "Look down. You can see the other camp now. That's Ben Bloomer coming in; an' say, that's your father now."

Thus Harry witnessed the attempt on Ben Bloomer's life which Old King Brady frustrated.

Now they saw Pete Pood take the detective and his fellow prisoner up to the cave and the fight between the Bloomers and the Hights in the glen, which had been so fierce that it would not be safe for them to advance until Pete left the cave. It was exciting to sit there and watch the fight. And Harry saw more than Old King Brady did for he saw the end of it. The moonshiners did not back, rallied before they reached the upper camp and returned furiously to the charge. This time victory was on their side.

Harry saw Hink High go down off his horse, and he thought he must have been shot dead. He turned and ran up the narrow valley, closest followed by the Bloomers whose wild yells of triumph echoed and reechoed from the rocky walls.

"Gee whiz! They're licked!" cried Toady. "Say, now we get in. I don't have no time about it, neither. Come on!"

The boy bounded away over the rocks, closely followed by Young King Brady. In a moment they had entered a narrow dell with the Hights. Harry knew it would have only excited him to see the Hights behind the cave.

"A man stepped into the light. "Hold on there!" he cried, raising a shotgun. "Challenge him to the opening of the case. Old King Brady said the situation demanded the quickest sort of action, if he were going to act at all. But no was equal to the occasion. Lowering his shotgun, he pointed it in the pit of the moonshiners, dousing him to the ground in a heap."

With a fierce imprecation, Boston Ben sprang upon his revolver.

"Now, I've got you, like I said," he cried. "Stand up! Put your hands behind your back, or I'll shoot you dead!"

"That's the way to talk," said Old King Brady, as the man suddenly rose, and Ben, with a curse, tried to tie his hands. "Well done, Ben! We've scored a point. What comes next?"

Ben leading the way they pushed on through the narrow passage, soon coming out into a second cave. Here there was another fight. Old King Brady seemed to have been put to secret use, and Old King Brady saw that when Pete Pood claimed in his letter to have a lot of unbottled whisky on hand, he had no lie.

A lighted lantern hung from a peg driven into a crevice in the wall made everything visible here.

"I don't see nothing of the prisoner," said Ben, "but he is probably here somewhere. Ben, let's have a drink. This is the real old man's drink. None of your doctor'd trash here. It's the real thing."

"For heaven's sake, don't go to loadin' him up with whisky," cried Old King Brady, as Ben picked up the gun.

"There he is," said Ben, "huddled out of a niche in the wall on their right, where he strut, red-faced man stretched upon an old mattress with a dirty bed quilt drawn over him.

"Tell him," said Ben. "Say, Brady, I tell you what we do's."

"Well?"

"Let's make the old guy give us an order on his Boston banker before we do a blamed thing for him. Come, what you say?"

"We'll see," replied the detective.

"He shall make it for a hundred thousand and so," continued Ben. "I must get something out of this to pay me for the trouble. You wake him up, Ben. I'll speak directly to him."

"If you have any wits left you'd better cut that out and look for the secret exit to this place."

"All right, soon I have another drink. The first one went to my head a bit, and I need another to clear it up. Don't be afraid of me getting drunk, old man."

He was drunk then and getting worse every instant, but Old King Brady felt

$500,000 TO START AIRPORT APPROVED BY CONGRESS BODY

Commission to Present Bill Asking Land Purchase
on House Floor.

INTRODUCTION PLANNED AFTER ACTION ON TARIFF

No Specific Site Favored in Measure, Although Six
Are Being Studied.

A bill appropriating $500,000 toward a municipal airport, or airports, for the National Capital was approved by the Congressional Airport Commission yesterday, and will be introduced in the House as soon as the tariff is out of the way.

The half million dollars would come entirely out of the Federal Treasury and would represent the Nation's contribution toward the airport project here. The question of dividing the ultimate cost of the project will be decided later.

Under the terms of the bill, the initial appropriation would be turned over immediately to the National Capital Planning Commission, which body, with the approval of the Congressional Airport Commission, would use it to purchase land or options on land for use as an airport.

An Emergency Measure.

Senator Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut, chairman of the Airport Commission, explained that the bill was essentially an emergency measure, designed to speed up action on the airport project.

One purpose of the bill, Bingham said, was to put the country on its guard against a "hold-up" on the part of the owners of land suitable for an airport. Obviously, he said, the longer Congress waits the more it will have to pay.

In drafting the bill, which was approved yesterday, the Airport Commission made no mention of specific sites. It is known, however, that a half dozen or more have been under consideration. "By having the National Capital Park and Planning Commission negotiate for the land for an option on the site," Bingham said, "we will have just exactly what we can get and what it will cost us."

Gravelly Point Site Not Abandoned.

Bingham and Representative Underhill (Republican), of Massachusetts, stressed the fact that the Gravelly Point site has not been abandoned. At the meeting yesterday, a subcommittee was appointed to give special consideration to that site.

In view of the fact that it already is on record as favoring the Gravelly Point site, it would not be surprising if the National Capital Park and Planning Commission again recommended it for the site. If it would, and if the Airport Commission approves the site, it would be necessary to buy a narrow strip of land from the State of Virginia.

Gravelly Point now is merely a skeletal on the Virginia side of the Potomac River, with the Washington Engineers say, however, that it would be a comparatively easy task to fill it in and provide a real flying field. None of the other sites is so near the heart of the city.

Given Way to Tariff Bill.

Representative Underhill was ready to introduce the bill yesterday, but at the suggestion of Chairman Snell, of the rules committee, he decided to hold it up until the tariff bill is out of the way.

In order to get the bill reported out of the House it will be necessary first to organize the House appropriations committee so that it can consider the measure.

Senator Bingham will introduce the bill in the Senate. He has received assurances from Majority Leader Watson that it will be taken up as soon as the House passes it.

In discussing the question of dividing the cost of the airport, Senator Bingham said the American Legion had expressed the opinion, however, that future appropriations would be carried in the regular District appropriation bill.

Woman Held for Jury Trial on Liquor Charge

Miss Mary K. Dittmar, 26 years old, a bobbed-haired blonde, was held in jail yesterday on a charge of possessing liquor after she demanded a jury trial before Judge Gus A. Schmid yesterday in Police Court. She pleaded not guilty.

The woman was arrested when Detectives S. P. Gravelly and R. P. Gardner of the Third Precinct, raided an apartment in 21st Street, which was on a disorderly house, warrant. Miss Marion Gracia, 20, and Charles S. Hunt, 24, were arrested with the defendant, but charged against them were dropped by Assistant District Attorney David H. Rosen, who said he had received 150 bottles of beer. Miss Dittmar was represented by Attorney Harry T. Whelan.

Seamen Memorial Service Tomorrow

Flowers Will Be Dropped in Potomac by Ladies
From Porpoise.

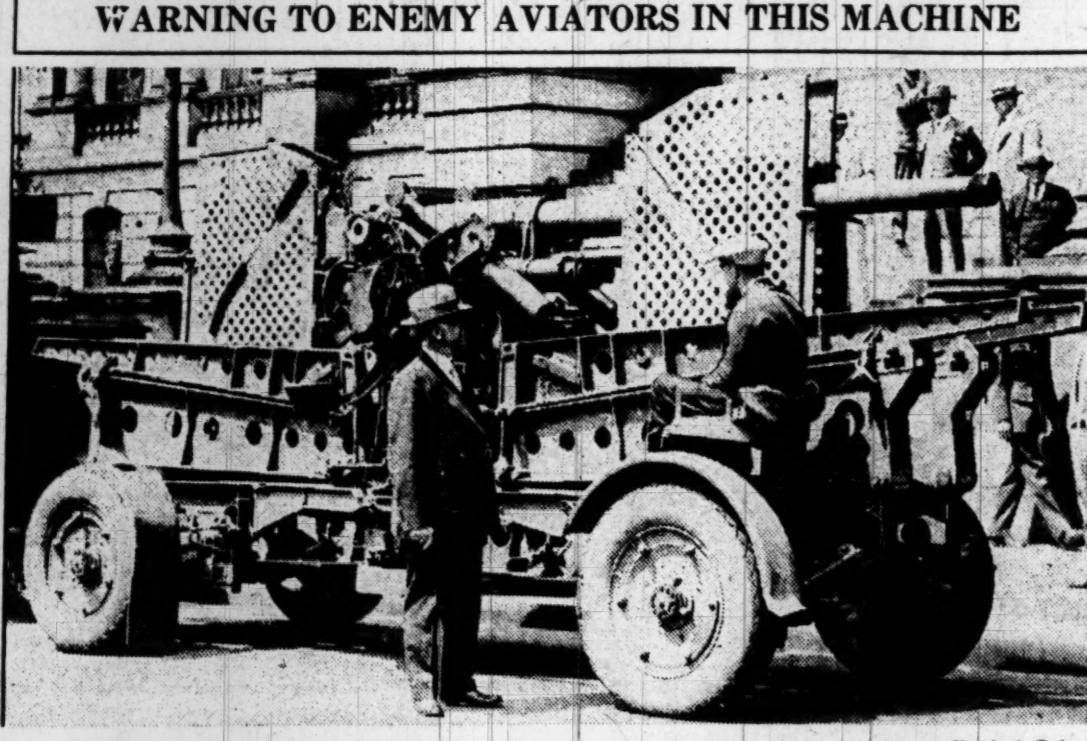

With Cuban Ambassador Orestes Perera and Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, as honor guests among others, the ladies auxiliaries of the American Legion will hold memorial services tomorrow morning aboard the U. S. S. Porpoise for all American sailors, sailors and marines who have lost their lives at sea.

The program, with the principal address by Senator Connally, will begin at 9:30 a.m. when the Porpoise will be anchored at 10 o'clock in the morning for Mount Vernon, where taps will be sounded by a bugler before the great swings about for the return trip and the dropping of flowers on the Potomac River.

The department commanders of various other patriotic organizations also will be honor guests with Olive M. Stevens, of Michigan, president of the American Legion, and William L. Grayson, of Savannah, Ga., commander-in-chief of Spanish War Veterans.

Paving Contracts Approved.

Two contracts for paving work were approved by the District Commissioners yesterday. The Cranford Co.'s bid of $16,462.50 for asphalt paving was approved, as was that of Corson and Crum of $16,380 for repairing concrete roadways and alleys.

WARNING TO ENEMY AVIATORS IN THIS MACHINE

Enemy aviators, beware—this latest mobile piece of anti-aircraft artillery seems to warn. It was exhibited yesterday on Executive avenue, near the White House. Secretary of War James W. Good was among the first to inspect it.

LEGISLATIVE WORK OF NAVY MEN IS HIT

Maintenance of Representative in Capital Must Cease, Order Declares.

QUICK REPLY IS MADE

Secretary of Navy Adams has demanded that the activities of a certain group of officers who maintain a representative in Washington to influence legislation cease immediately.

Secretary Adams issued his demand in a message that was sent to the entire service. "It has come to the attention of the department," the message said, "that a certain group of officers, forming in effect a combination, maintain a representative in Washington through individual subscription for the purpose of influencing legislation in favor of that group."

The department considers that such activities are in violation of Articles 92 and 95, United States Naval Regulations.

It is directed that these officers immediately cease all commanding

She was taken to Garfield Hospital and treated for a sprained back, a broken nose, shock and possible internal injuries.

STATUTE LIMITS REFUNDS

Assessments totaling $478,574.55 were ordered stricken from the District tax books yesterday by the District Commissioners as a result of the recent decision of the Court of Appeals ruling.

Officials in the Navy refused to comment on the order. John C. Brothman, legal representative in Washington of approximately 7000 commissioned prior service officers, however, immediately wrote a letter to the Secretary, taking issue with the order.

"To any one familiar with the fact," he said, "it would appear from the phraseology employed that the Navy Department has but recently become aware of the activity referred to and that the procedure employed is objectionable. With this in mind, I am sure that the Department will bring this to the special attention of all commanding and warrant officers under their commands."

Col. Church Sworn
As Pensions Head

Hartford Man Is Insurance Expert and Veteran of World War.

Col. Earl D. Church, of Hartford, Conn., was sworn in as Commissioner of Pensions of the Department of the Interior. The new pension commissioner is an insurance man of 33 years' experience, having been associated with a Hartford firm since 1896.

Col. Church has been active in the Connecticut National Guard since he was a young man. During the World War he held a commission as major of ordnance and at the close of the war had the rank of lieutenant colonel.

He served overseas and received the Distinguished Service Medal for gallantry in the Argonne offensive.

The coroner's jury found that Sykes had come to his death as the result of an assault by one or more persons.

It ordered John Weaver, manager of the J. W. Patterson Co., to furnish the coroner with all information concerning the death of Sykes.

The majority of the Senate, in a final vote yesterday, agreed that the bill should be passed in order to correct the grave injustice that has been done to the lower-paid employees.

The two gas companies have refused to pay the tax demanded and therefore the majority of the employees will not be paid.

But the telephone company has paid each year under protest and the amount due that company is approximately $300,000. The District can refund the tax for the last three years.

As soon as the statute of limitations is past, will make it necessary for the company to have Congress authorize refund of the amounts paid in preceding years. The fight has been waged since 1913.

Film of Joan of Arc
Shown at Press Club

The tragic story of the Maid of Orleans was unfolded before a distinguished audience in the National Press Club last night in the first Washington screening of "The Passion of Joan of Arc," a silent picture by the Societe Generale des Film.

A remarkable characterization of the title role by Mlle. Maria Falconetti, an actress of great power, and some exceptionally fine photographic shots distinguished the French production.

With the work of Garey, Dreyfus, director, and Rudolph Maté, camera man, the picture was brought to Washington by Michael J. Garland, American director of the Societe Generale des Films.

Soldier's Tomb.

Past, present and contemplated work of the Grand Army of the Republic and other patriotic organizations was lauded last night by Representative John M. Robson, of Kentucky, and Rear Admiral R. E. Coontz, at a meeting at the Colonial Hotel.

Robson is represented by Judge Roberton Moncur, of Alexandria, and Elmerford by T. Morris Wampler, of Washington.

The girl identified the two men Thursday following their arrest. The girl, who was a 16-year-old, was born in Brooklyn, and was last seen in Brooklyn, June 11.

Ten wreaths were placed on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and a floral piece was placed on the grave of Floyd Bennett.

Miss Hall told of plans for carrying out the pilgrimage every year.

There are 52 departments of the American Legion and auxiliaries.

Trial of William Coulter, of 623 Jefferson avenue northwest, and Guy Elmerford, of 1105 K street northwest, on statutory charges filed by a 16-year-old girl, was adjourned yesterday for June 14 by Judge Howard W. Smith in Fairfax Circuit Court, after both pleaded not guilty upon arraignment.

Lure of Circus Suspected
In Disappearance of Boy, 15

Simultaneously with the departure of the circus Tuesday, Stephen J. Devine, 15 years old, of 1224 Columbia avenue northwest, disappeared from his home, and his mother believes that the lure of the "big top" probably is responsible.

He told police of the Ninth Precinct yesterday in asking them to broadcast a lookout for the boy.

Mrs. Devine said that the circus had always held a great fascination for young Stephen, and that during its two-day stand early this week at Camp Meigs, which is only a few blocks from the boy's home, he had spent most of his time there.

He is described as five feet tall, and having brown hair and hazel eyes.

When he left home he wore a dark blue suit, a gray cap and tennis shoes.

Residents of the 2100 block of Leroy place northwest, who object to the noise of school children at play were victorious in a fight before the District Commissioners yesterday. They objected to the granting of a permit to the Potomac School, on California street, to occupy a building in its rear.

Mrs. H. Barrett Learned, wife of a resident member of the Board of Education, sought the permit. The Leroy street house is zoned residential and a nonconforming occupancy permit would be necessary for the additional school to be built. The school had had applications for the admission of more children than could be accommodated and it was desired to enlarge it.

The hearing was held in the board room in the rear of the school building in the morning and the adverse decision was given by the Commissioners later in the afternoon.
